Map

Kalahari

The Kalahari Desert is a large semi-arid sandy savannah in southern Africa, covering 900,000 square kilometres (350,000 sq mi) and covering most of Botswana and parts of Namibia and South Africa.

Kalahari is derived from the Tswana word Kgala, meaning 'the great thirst', or Kgalagadi, meaning 'a waterless place'; the Kalahari has vast areas of red sand without any permanent surface water.

A semi-desert with vast areas of excellent grazing land after good rains, the Kalahari supports more animals and plants than a true desert, such as the Namib Desert to the west. Rainfall is low and summer temperatures are very high. The driest areas typically receive 110-200 millimetres (4.3-7.9 in) of rain per year, and the wettest areas just over 500 millimetres (20 in). The surrounding Kalahari Basin covers over 2,500,000 square kilometres (970,000 sq mi) and extends into Botswana, Namibia and South Africa, and into parts of Angola, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

Kgalagadi Transfrontier Park

Where red dunes and scrub fade into infinity and herds of gemsbok, springbok, eland and blue wildebeest follow the seasons, where imposing camelthorn trees provide shade for giant black-maned lions and vantage points for leopards and many birds of prey... this is the Kgalagadi Transfrontier Park.

Augrabies Falls National Park

Close to Upington, Augrabies Falls National Park lies on the banks of the mighty Orange River. The Khoi people called it 'Aukoerebis', or 'place of great noise', because of the mighty flow of water unleashed from its rocky surroundings.

Klipspringers and quiver trees stand in stark silhouette against the African sky in this unique geological environment where only those who can adapt ultimately survive. The park is home to the majestic Augrabies Falls, which plunge 56 metres into a spectacular 18km gorge below.

Riemvasmaak

Riemvasmaak Hot Springs is one of the main attractions for visitors to the Northern Cape, located just north of Augrabies Falls, about 60km from the small town of Kakamas. It is surrounded by spectacular scenery and 80m high granite cliffs.

The hot springs are the result of volcanic eruptions. Although these are no longer active, the underground activity still heats the spring water and provides the most glorious warm water swimming pools.

After the morning drive, we explore the Kgalagadi to the north of the Twee Rivieren Camp. Learn about the Nossob and Auob Rivers and how often they are in flood.

The Kgalagadi Transfrontier Park lies in the large sand-filled basin in the west of the Southern African subcontinent, known as the Kalahari. It covers almost one-third of the area and forms what may be the largest sandveld area in the world.

In 1999, Botswana and South Africa signed a historic bilateral agreement whereby both countries undertook to manage their adjacent national parks, the Gemsbok National Park and the Kalahari Gemsbok National Park as a single ecological unit. In 2000, Southern Africa's first peace park, the Kgalagadi Transfrontier Park, was formally launched by presidents Mogae (Botswana) and Mbeki (South Africa).

After stretching our legs at the Mata Mata Camp, we follow the Auob River back to the Twee Rivieren Camp. The Kalahari will definitely surprise us along the way.

Drive from the Kgalagadi TFP to the Augrabies Falls NP

We say goodbye to the Kgalagadi TFP and drive to the Augrabies Falls NP via Upington.

Augrabies is derived from the Nama word as the Khoi people would refer to "Aukoerebis" meaning the "place of great noise." This refers to the Orange River water thundering its way down the 56m spectacular main waterfall.

The ancestors of modern history have inhabited the area surrounding the Orange River since the Early Stone Age. During this time, there is evidence that early man had developed weapons for hunting animals like hippopotamus. They knew to establish themselves near good water sources like the Orange River. During the Middle Stone Age, man had created more formal work tools and began to utilise fire. The Late Stone Age, which dates back 22,000 years, is characterised by tools that are smaller than the previous periods.

You can choose to prepare your own meals or visit the on-site restaurant.

Visit Riemvasmaak hot springs

Today we drive to the Riemvasmaak hot springs. The road winds through the most amazing rock formations of all shapes, sizes and colours. The hot springs are one of the must-visit hot springs in South Africa. They were formed from volcanic eruptions that occurred centuries ago.

Riemvasmaak (pronounced "rim fus maack") means "tighten the strap" or "tied with straps". Riemvasmaak is 75,000 ha of sheer mountain desert wilderness located between the Orange and the dry Molopo Rivers. It is a wilderness born from violent volcanic activity millions of years ago, but it is a land of beauty that takes on spiritual proportions. Here you can relax in the hot springs dwarfed by 80m-high granite cliffs or simply set your soul free to soar with the black eagles through the lunar landscape.

You can choose to prepare your own meals or visit the on-site restaurant.
